

WE ARE ALWAYS ON, ALWAYS THERE.

*Local broadcasters can be a lifeline for critical news.
– Craig Fugate, FEMA Administrator*

Photo credit: FEMA/Marvin Nauman

When disaster strikes, local television and radio stations are often the only dependable source of critical news and emergency information for Americans.

Broadcasters are a lifeline to their communities and provide the “on the ground” coverage that national outlets simply can’t replicate.

Unfortunately, certain pay-TV companies are seeking to make local stations more difficult to access, putting Americans in danger only to pad their bottom lines.

Keep our communities safe and let local broadcasters do what they do best – provide the news, weather, emergency warnings and entertainment that listeners and viewers rely on every day.

WeAreBroadcasters.com

 #WeAreBroadcasters

 NAB®
NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF BROADCASTERS